While we aspire tomake the Living Agedesirable to all who wish to keep themselves informed of the rapid progress of the movement—to statesmen, divines, lawyers, and physicians—to men of business and time of leisure,—it is still a stronger object to make it attractive to their vives and children. We believe that we can thus do some good in our day and generation, and hope to make the work indisponsable, because in this day of cheap literature it is not possible to guard against the influx of what is bad in taste and vicious in morals, in any other way than by furnishing a sufficient supply of a healthy character. The mental and moral appetite must be gratified.
